

John McCullough Joins the Micronutrient Initiative as Regional Director for Africa

John McCullough comes to the Micronutrient Initiative with a strong background in international development programs in health and education, strategic planning, partnerships, institution building and performance management. He is a British/Irish citizen and has academic qualifications in Economics and Quality Management. His last position (where he has served for nearly 10 years) was Managing Director of Liverpool Associates in Tropical Health Ltd (LATH) based in Liverpool, UK. This is an international health consultancy company attached to the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine.

John has had plenty of working experience in Africa. He lived and worked in Francophone West Africa for 5 years and North Africa for 3 years. He has recently been involved in projects in Kenya, Malawi, Mozambique and Nigeria.

John expects to join MI on March 3. We welcome him to the fold and are sure that under his leadership, MI's programs in Africa will continue to expand and show impact.